The Great Bear Rainforest

The Mid Coast of British Columbia from Rivers Inlet to the Skeena River is also known as the Great Bear Rainforest. This area is true wilderness and sees very few human visitors, making it an exciting adventure destination. Within the Great Bear Rainforest lie some of the world's last pristine coastal rainforest: Old-growth hemlock and cedar forests; tidewater estuaries rich with grasses, roots and berries; cascading waterfalls and sparkling streams of spawning salmon. In the fall, bears, wolves, and birds come to the streams and rivers to feed on the salmon.

The Spirit Bear

The rare white Kermode, a sub-species of black bear, is wild, elusive and little known to North Americans other than the Tsimshian-speaking people of the north coast of British Columbia. These people have shared its territory for thousands of years.

The North American black bear, although generally black-coated, produces a certain percentage of bears that are all white. One of the Tsimshians' myths says that "Raven made one in every 10 bears white to remind the people of the time when glaciers covered this land".

The Spirit Bears of the Great Bear Rainforest have had very little exposure to humans. As it can be difficult to locate these bears, we have undertaken numerous trips over the past seventeen years to get a better idea of their behaviour and range. Today, working in close conjunction with local Native groups, conservation groups and bear biologists, our guides take small groups of people into the area each year to search for, watch and photograph these elusive and exquisite animals.

Typically at this time of year, humpback whales frequent the inlets and bays: we will watch and photograph these magnificent mammals when the opportunity presents itself. Due to extreme weather conditions and rough terrain and to maximize our chances of seeing a Spirit Bear, we will utilize native built viewing platforms in certain situations. We will also explore estuaries and bays, and watch the remarkable feat of salmon spawning. This is a multi-faceted trip, focusing on the bears but also on the entire ecosystem in which they thrive. We will use the Ocean Light II as a base, and a motorized inflatable to transfer people between the boat and the shore. Six kayaks are on the Ocean Light II for those wishing to enjoy the tranquility of paddling as we explore one of the last unlogged temperate rainforests in the world.

What's Involved?

This trip aboard the Ocean Light II takes you to one of the world's most spectacular coastlines. You will explore the inlets, bays and old-growth forest of the spectacular midcoast of British Columbia, including Princess Royal Island, the ancestral home of the rare white Kermode Bear. The surrounding mountains and rainforest are home to grizzly bears, wolves, wolverines, black bears, spirit bears, deer, and beavers. The Great Bear Rainforest offers incredible variety. We will walk trails, explore creeks, search for and hopefully photograph Spirit Bears, black bears, grizzly and wolves.

The photographic opportunities are amazing. This trip will give you access to some of the best bear viewing locations in the world! Participants should arrive in good physical and mental shape prepared for a flexible itinerary that may require much physical activity, including hiking on uneven and wet terrain. Weather conditions may be variable and participants must be prepared for adverse weather including torrential rain and cold temperatures. Although conditions may be difficult at times, the rewards are great, as you become part of a small percentage of people who have explored

What About the Weather? Weather along the coast in the fall can be variable. One should expect the variety of weather that creates the many moods for which this area is noted. Past experience tells us that September can be a very wet month. Be prepared for rain and overcast skies and for cooler temperatures. Later in the month we start to see the first frosts. This said, the sun does shine in the fall and classic Indian summers are not rare.
